

Healthcare: 'We need resources, not talks'

HANNAH MIRSKY
@HannahMirskyCN

HEALTHCARE bosses have been quizzed by councillors over issues including pressure on Haverhill's GPs, lack of funding, and transport to hospital.

West Suffolk Clinical Commissioning Group's acting chief operating officer Andrew Eley and head of communications Isabel Cockayne attended a meeting of Haverhill Town Council last night alongside Haverhill Family Practice GP Dr Firas Watfeh.

Their visit comes after more than 800 people signed an online petition calling for better access to GP appointments in Haverhill.

It emerged that there is higher demand for health services in Haverhill than elsewhere in the country – and this demand has increased in recent years.

Dr Watfeh said that despite his surgery offering more appointments than the national average, they were still struggling to cope with demand.

He said: "As a GP working in the local area, there has been an increased pressure on local services, particularly in the last year or two.

"We are trying to work with whatever services are available in the local area. We are still struggling in terms of workload and workforces."

Cllr Tony Brown said that Haverhill was a victim of a funding formula that didn't acknowledge the higher levels of demand among younger residents.

He added that many residents had trouble getting to West Suffolk Hospital in Bury St Edmunds via public transport.

Other councillors pointed to further reasons why the demand in Haverhill could be so high, with Cllr Pat Hanlon mentioning the two areas of "deprivation" in Haverhill East and Haverhill South.

Cllr Maureen Byrne said that the closure of the Crown Walk-In Centre in 2012 had led to £1.2million of healthcare funding being withdrawn from the town.

Mr Eley and Ms Cockayne described some of the CCG's efforts to tackle the national problem of increased pressure on GPs.

A programme called Connect, which has already been trialled in Sudbury, is set to be rolled out in Haverhill in the autumn. The programme promotes closer working between healthcare and other services such as social care to reduce inefficiencies and make care more patient-centred.

Ms Cockayne added that it was important to get the message out about when to go to a doctor and how to avoid health problems, and asked the town council to help spread the word.

She said: "We need some more help and support in working with individuals to help them to help themselves."

But Cllr Maureen Byrne said that more resources were needed, adding that in five years' time, when Haverhill's population would nearly equal Bury St Edmunds, she would be calling for a hospital in the town.

She said: "What I hear you saying is all about talking shops and no action. I don't mean to be disrespectful, but we need a lot more than what you are suggesting."

It was suggested that another meeting between the CCG and the council be held in the autumn when the Connect programme had been rolled out, possibly with the attendance of NHS England, the body responsible for funding healthcare.

NHS England's representatives were unable to attend Tuesday's meeting.

YOUTH

Apprenticeships project awarded £50k in funding

HERE TO HELP: Youth Skills manager Karen Chapple with apprentices Amber Body and Pieres Flowers
Picture: Keith Jones

A PROJECT which has helped hundreds of young people in Haverhill find work is set to continue for another two years – thanks to £50,000 in funding.

ONE Haverhill's Youth Skills project was set up in 2013 as part of the government-funded Our Place Community budget pilot to create opportunities for young people.

The money was set to run out this year – but £50,000 in grant funding has been secured by ONE Haverhill, and Haverhill Town Council has contributed funds.

This will enable the scheme to run for another two years.

The scheme's youth skills manager, Karen Chapple, was appointed in 2014 and 50 new apprenticeships have been created each year as close links have been forged between business and education in Haverhill.

The initial goal when the scheme was set up was to create just 10 new apprenticeships.

@HannahMirskyCN

Karen also helps young people with CV and application writing skills, helps them find training and ensures the right training is provided in the town, and works with local schools.

She said: "Working with young people in the town means working with an ever-changing group of people with changing needs."

"When I meet a young person it is about assessing what we can do to help them be successful, it's about listening to them and hearing what they need from us to get them on the path to work."

Karen even won a national award for her work on the project at the Our Place Awards 2015.

Sarah Howard, chair of ONE Haverhill, said: "I am absolutely delighted by the success of the youth skills project and it is a great example of what can be achieved when different organisations in the town work together. That is exactly why ONE Haverhill was set up.

"I want to thank the organisations who have given funding to enable the project to continue for at least a further two years and Karen and her apprentice Pieres Flowers for all their hard work in helping the young people in the town."

The youth skills project currently has apprenticeships available in accountancy, manufacturing, labelling, book-keeping, landscape gardening and at an estate agency.

Young people who want to know more about apprenticeships, or receive support on finding and applying for opportunities, should contact Karen.

You can call or text her on 07877 142000 or email youthskillsmanager@one-haverhill.co.uk

Police appeal after man is seriously injured in collision

A DRIVER is being sought by police after a man was left seriously injured after being hit by a car.

Officers would like to hear from the driver of the vehicle or witnesses who may have seen the collision between 3am and 5am on June 18.

The victim, who was in his 40s, was walking across Balsham Road, Linton, close to the Post Office when the incident happened.

A man assisted the victim by driving him to Joiners Road but left without leaving any contact details.

The victim was taken to Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge later that day and underwent surgery.

Detective Constable Ian Butcher said: "I would like to speak to anyone who was around at that time of night and might have seen something. I also appeal directly to the driver of the vehicle who assisted the victim to come forward."

Call Cambridgeshire Police on 101 if you saw anything.

Mum's walk for baby girls

A MUM of premature twin girls who battled to reach their first birthday will be trekking 10 miles with friends as a thank you to the charity that supported her.

Serena Hanks, of Linton, has organised 'Millie and Lottie's Journey Home' from The Rosie Hospital in Cambridge to their home in Linton on Sunday.

The walk, which represents the twins' first few months of life, is to thank The Sick Children's Trust for giving them a 'Home from Home' while the girls underwent life-saving treatment in hospital, after being born at just 25 weeks on June 15 last year.

DEVELOPMENT

Corn Exchange: Task force set up

HAVERHILL Town Council's possible bid on the Corn Exchange has moved a step closer – as a task group has been set up to work on the project.

The group of six councillors will meet fortnightly to receive reports on the work being done by a chartered surveyor and architect's firm on what a renovated Corn Exchange could look like.

The councillors will also sign off funding and discuss the direction of the project.

The task group – which was appointed at a meeting on Tuesday night – has a budget of £43,300 for its work.

A private buyer expressed an interest in the Corn Exchange in March this year.

As a result, the town council declared its intention to bid on the property, triggering a six month moratorium period.

The council now has until September to do preparatory work and decide whether it would be worthwhile to go ahead with the bid.

Even if the town council bids on the Corn Exchange,

HANNAH MIRSKY
@HannahMirskyCN

the current property owner may choose to sell it to another bidder.

Town clerk Colin Poole said: "The public are well aware that local authorities tend to be slightly ponderous in the speed at which they work, and we simply do not have the time for that as far as the Corn Exchange is concerned."

"The moratorium period runs through to September and the town council will then have to decide whether to commit a large sum of public money."

The task group is set to meet fortnightly with Mr Poole and project manager Dayle Bayliss, a chartered surveyor who has previously worked on projects such as @TheRec, the new cafe on the recreation ground in Stowmarket. She has previously worked with the town council on the project to turn the town's former magistrates' court into a youth hub, writing the report which convinced the town council it was not a good use of taxpayers' money.

Mr Poole said: "It was her forensic approach, being able to deliver all those points in a really clear way – we need that. We will be able to make a very robust decision."

The architect's firm which will be working on the project is set to be announced imminently.

The task group will act under delegated powers from the town councils, meaning that decisions such as spending can be taken quickly, without waiting for a formal town council meeting.

The town councillors who have been appointed to the Corn Exchange task group are Maureen Byrne, Tony Brown, Quillon Fox, Barry Robbins, Betty McLatchy and Jason Crooks.

Jenny braves a skydive after losing three stone

A WOMAN lost three stone in weight and conquered her fear of heights to raise £3,000 for charity by completing a tandem skydive.

Jenny Shackleton decided a skydive would be a good way to raise money for the MS Trust, after her husband, Sacha, was diagnosed with relapsing remitting multiple sclerosis.

"I'll be honest, I screamed when I got out of the aeroplane," said Jenny, 44, of Kirtling Place, Haverhill, who has always been afraid of heights.

She was in free-fall with her instructor for several minutes, before he pulled the parachute cord.

"I then had absolutely no fear at all – I felt so safe," she said. "You're looking at the ground and everything's so small."

She decided to raise money for the MS Trust after the couple went to meetings and met other people with the disease.

Jenny said: "Once you've gone from relapsing remitting to secondary progressive to primary progressive, all they can do is address the symptoms. I am hoping the ongoing research and the ongoing care will help."

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

Once Jenny decided to take on the tandem skydive, she discovered she was above the weight limit. Doctors advised her to take part in a Live Well Suffolk weight loss course and she managed to shed three stone.

And at the end of March, Jenny booked her skydive at the North London Skydiving Centre in Wimblington near March – and she did it on Sunday.

Jenny has so far managed to raise a total of around £3,000 for the MS Trust, including a combination of in-person and online donations, and £395 from her employer, Haverhill-based company Keronite.

Thief takes breaker from roadworks

A HYDRAULIC breaker being used at roadworks in Haverhill's Bumpstead Road was stolen last week.

The theft took place during daylight, when the National Grid-owned piece of equipment was left unattended.

The breaker is yellow and black, made by JCB and attaches to a mini digger.

If you saw anything suspicious, call Haverhill police on 101.

Stones, brick and bottle thrown at home

RESIDENTS had stones, a brick and a bottle thrown at their Haverhill home last week.

The incident took place at 1.05am last Monday, June 13, when the occupants heard items being thrown at their house in Abercorn Court. The items included stones, a brick, and a whiskey bottle, which smashed.

Police do not know why the house was targeted. If you have any information, call Haverhill police on 101.

Items stolen from charity clothes bank

SHIRTS and blouses have been stolen from a charity clothing bank in Haverhill in the middle of the day.

At around 12.15pm on Monday, June 13, a man was seen jemmying open the clothes bank in the town's Cangle Road and loading items from it into a black Ford Fiesta before driving away. If you know anything about this incident, contact Haverhill police on 101.

GLAMOROUS: Residents and visitors at Clèves Place's Hollywood-themed party

Care home residents get dressed up for an Oscars-themed open day

A CARE home in Haverhill celebrated its open day with a Hollywood-inspired event last week.

On Friday, residents, relatives and visitors at Clèves Place Care Home in the town's Milfields Way were treated to an Oscars-themed party.

They enjoyed canapes, Buck's Fizz and cream teas, and were entertained by a catwalk show and a Hollywood-style singer.

Sharlene Van Tonder, home manager at Clèves Place, said: "It was a wonderful day and we were delighted to see so many local people. Residents had a brilliant day and it was great to strengthen our relationships with the wider community."

Visitors were also able to pick up Care UK's advice guides, such as the new "Eating as you age" booklet about older people's diets.

Devolution deal discussed

COUNCILLORS are set to discuss a new devolution deal for Suffolk next week.

The deal, announced last week, would see £100million invested in house-building across Norfolk and Suffolk and a £225million budget dedicated to transport, all administered by a directly elected mayor.

It replaces a previous deal which would have seen Suffolk and Norfolk join with Cambridgeshire under one elected mayor.

This deal was unpopular in Cambridgeshire, with county councillors saying the area covered was too large and the funding was not enough to make a difference.

In the new deal, Norfolk and Suffolk will have one directly-elected mayor and Cambridgeshire and Peterborough will have another, but the two new authorities will work together on strategic issues such as infrastructure and transport.

The proposed devolution deal would see Norfolk and Suffolk given £25mil-lion every year for the next 30 years to grow the local economy, with the aim of creating 95,000 jobs by 2025. The counties will receive £100 million funding for housing, and it is estimated that the deal could lead to a total of 200,000 new homes being built.

HANNAH MIRSKY
@HannahMirskyCN

The new authority is set to have control of a £225million transport budget, as well as controlling an existing £22million for adult skills and apprenticeships.

Leader of St Edmundsbury Borough Council John Griffiths said: "I think what we have done is secure a very ambitious devolution deal across East Anglia and what we've got on the table is the best proposed deal in the country for any area. It basically offers us more decision making powers on matters that affect Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Peterborough, and means that more local decisions can be taken locally and not just by central government."

The new devolution deal is set to be discussed by St Edmundsbury's full council and cabinet on Tuesday.

If all councils across Suffolk and Norfolk and the New Anglia Local Enterprise Partnership approve the deal, public consultation would take place in July and August.

The public's views would be reported to the Secretary of State to consider before the combined authorities are created.

If all went ahead as planned, elections for the new mayor would take place in May next year.

To view the deal documents and other information, visit www.eastanglia-devodeal.org.uk.

Traffic issue must be sorted

I ENTIRELY agree with the councillors that the transport issues have not been addressed with regards to the Great Wisley Park development.

It is of particular interest to me not only because I live on the Sturmer Kedington Road but The Great Wisley farm was purchased from my family and I have lived, firstly on the farm and in my current house for 50 years, so I do know the area intimately.

When the plan was first published I objected to the fact that NOTHING was going to be done to upgrade the Coupals Road (between Haverhill and the Kedington Road), I also said it would be bound to increase the amount of traffic using Kedington Road, and to Sturmer for anyone going south east, which it will.

Both roads are not wide enough to take any extra traffic without being upgraded. It just will not happen that all traffic wanting to go south will go via the Haverhill Bury Road, the A143, and then to Sturmer through Kedington. They will use Coupals Road. Coupals Road is a disgrace at the moment as anyone can see.

It is not wide enough for two large cars to pass without one stopping, the verges are in urgent need of repair and the grass verges need cutting. I can't believe the town bus service uses it for double decker buses, it is totally unsuitable. It should at least have a seven ton, or less limit on it. The councillors are absolutely right the infrastructure MUST be addressed before the development goes ahead.

THREE COUNTIES TRANSPORT is now known as Connecting Communities and started on Monday, June 13. Thanks are extended to Councillor Tony Brown for funding new T shirts and fleeces for all the volunteers and to those volunteers who braved the rain for the photo with him (right). Thanks also go to Councillor Paula Cox for funding towards a newer wheelchair-carrying car which provides a much-needed service.

Now Haverhill, Bury St Edmunds and Newmarket all work together for Connecting Communities and operate under The Voluntary Network. Various services are provided including DRT, a demand responsive service for connections to bus and train links in rural areas, and a new Sunday service between Newmarket, Cambridge and Haverhill. Please pre-book all DRT services. Dial-A-Ride is now the door-to-door transport ser-

TRANSPORT

Have say on A1307 plans

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

RESIDENTS and businesses are being asked for their views on proposed new bus and cycle routes between Haverhill and Cambridge.

The Greater Cambridge City Deal is asking for comments on proposed measures for the A1307 corridor, including a dedicated walking and cycling route linking Haverhill, Linton and the Abingtons and a new park-and-ride service at Fourwentways.

Other proposals include a segregated bus link between Granta Park and Cambridge Biomedical Campus which could be used by buses to Haverhill, and bus priority measures in Linton.

A number of consultation events are being held along the corridor including one on Thursday, July 7, from 5pm to 8pm, at the Haverhill Arts Centre.

Cllr Lewis Herbert, leader of Cambridge City Council and chair of the City Deal Executive Board, said: "The plans, when finalised, could revolutionise journeys for commuters travelling along this route from Cambridge, villages in South Cambridgeshire and Haverhill.

"It will mean improved and more reliable alternatives to the car for travelling between home and work or study, for part or even all of the journey.

"However, we recognise the interest in the potential environmental impacts of some of these ideas.

"No decisions have yet been made and I would therefore urge people to have their say and help influence the way the ideas develop."

The consultation runs until August 1. Feedback will go towards creating detailed plans which will be considered by the City Deal decision-making board in the spring of next year.

If the board agrees, a preferred option or options will then go out for a second round of consultation.

To fill out the online questionnaire or see full details of the plans, visit www.gccitydeal.co.uk/A1307.

Firefighters called to town supermarket

FIRE crews were called to a Haverhill supermarket twice in the space of a week.

The first call out to Tesco superstore in Cangle Road was at 8am on Saturday, June 11, and the second was around 9am last Friday.

It was reported that the store was evacuated both times and on each occasion the alert proved to be a false alarm.

CHARITY

Businesses compete to raise funds

HAVERHILL businesses and organisations are to compete to raise as much money as possible for a local charity.

Samuel Ward Academy and Haverhill-based lettings agent CXG are among those taking part in the Jacobs Allen Accumulator Challenge run by St Nicholas Hospice Care.

The challenge sees businesses given a £50 float and asked to raise as much money as possible with it for the hospice charity, which helps people with long-term and life-threatening illnesses.

Last year's challenge raised £40,000 for the charity, with the winners, Bury St Edmunds Asda, raising £5,685.

This year's challenge was launched last Wednesday, June 15, and participants have until September 30 to make a profit for the charity.

The hospice's fundraising director Kevin Clements said: "The Accumulator Challenge really is a fantastic chance for local businesses to get their thinking caps on and come up with some innovative fundraising ideas.

"We have had some brilliant fundraising activities in the past and I am certain this year will be no different. It really is wonderful to see so many local businesses willing to show their support for our hospice.

"We are incredibly fortunate to have Jacobs Allen behind the Accumulator Challenge. They have proven they are superb fundraisers by winning the challenge in the past and the challenge benefits tremendously from their ambition for success, expertise and their commitment to local businesses."

There's still time for businesses to get involved by emailing the charity's corporate fundraiser Rachel Card at rachel.card@stnh.org.uk.

COMMUNITY

£300k on offer for projects

MORE than £300,000 is now available for community projects.

Applications are now open for St Edmundsbury Borough Council's Community Chest funding, with £332,147 available for the 2017/18 year. The money is for charities and community and voluntary organisations that strengthen families and build community resilience.

Last year, £8,900 of the funding went to Catch22, Suffolk Positive Futures, which provides free weekly sports sessions for young people in Haverhill and Bury St Edmunds to help them learn life skills and build their future.

St Edmundsbury councillor Robert Everitt said: "Sometimes, for whatever reason, young people may feel disassociated from the very community that they are growing up in. By building their confidence, learning life skills and building a connection with their part of the community we increase their contribution to society and reduce the costs from nuisance and support later in life. It's a great example of how Community Chest can work."

Applications are open until Friday, September 30, with successful bids being announced by the end of the year and projects starting in April next year.

HEALTH

Exercise for people who have cancer

A PROGRAMME of physical activities has been developed for people in Haverhill who have been diagnosed with cancer.

The programme, developed as part of Macmillan's recovery package, features activities ranging from badminton to chair pilates to circle dancing.

It has been compiled by Louise Smith, Macmillan's survivorship lead for Suffolk, in partnership with Suffolk Sport.

Louise said: "Physical activity is such an important part of cancer recovery and rehabilitation, it should be part of the patient pathway in the same way treatments and investigations are. Exercise really can have a significant positive impact on how patients feel and recover."

Dr Andrew Yager, a West Suffolk GP who works with Macmillan, said: "This is a fabulous initiative by Macmillan for people with a cancer diagnosis and other long term conditions. There is a growing body of evidence to support regular exercise as a means of improving health outcomes in long term conditions, including cancer."

If you would like to find out more, contact Maddy Knox at Suffolk Sport on 07825790832 or maddy.knox@suffolksport.com, or Macmillan on (01284) 713023.

MEMORIAL

Memorial ceremony to remember town's fallen

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

A REDEDICATION service yesterday was just one of a series of events planned to honour Haverhill's services personnel over the coming fortnight.

The ceremony, held at Haverhill cemetery, marked the raising of the town's Northern Ireland memorial and the adding of two names to the Second World War memorial. It was attended by the families of the men remembered and members of the RAE.

The ceremony was organised by the Haverhill branch of the Royal British Legion, which has also been involved in preparing an Armed Forces Day extravaganza this weekend.

This Saturday, Haverhill's Market Square will play host to parades, military vehicles and an installation of pictures of Haverhill's services personnel.

CEREMONY: Gathered at the memorial for the rededication.

There will also be flags raised on poles put up specially for the occasion.

Towards the end of next week, the Haverhill branch of the Royal British Legion has planned to mark the 100th anniversary of the start of the Battle of the Somme.

On Friday, July 1, the Royal British Legion has organised a whistle-blowing at Haverhill cemetery. This

7.30am event is part of a national whistle-blowing memorial to mark the moment, precisely a century earlier, when whistles were blown to send British soldiers over the top of the trenches to start the battle.

At St Mary's Church, an installation in the churchyard will feature 20,000 poppies made by local schoolchildren to remember the 20,000 men who died on the first day of the devastating battle. This is set to be unveiled by the children at 9.30am.

Inside the church, open from 10am to 3pm from July 1 to 3, there are set to be floral tributes to the 20 Haverhill men who lost their lives in the Battle of the Somme and information boards about the battle.

The church will also play host to a free talk – with audience interaction – about the Battle of the Somme by historian William Tyler at 11am on Saturday, July 2.

BEREAVEMENT

Event in memory of baby Jacob raises over £2,000

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

A FUNDRAISING evening held in memory of a baby boy has raised more than £2,000.

Dean and Luci Morton, who live in Wickhambrook, were told their son Jacob had no heart-beat at a 37-week scan.

Doctors had to perform an emergency Caesarean section to save Jacob's twin Isaac, who is now 14 weeks old.

Dean said: "Our world had just ended, nothing anyone could say or do could take away the pain and the heart-breaking news we had just heard."

"I cuddled Luci and held her tight as I could – I wanted to take away the pain from her, but I knew I couldn't. We both cried for what seemed like forever."

After the Caesarean section at West Suffolk Hospital, the bereaved parents were able to spend some time with Jacob using a cuddle cot – a special crib that keeps babies cool after they have passed away so their parents can stay with them longer.

Dean said: "We both spent some precious time with him that will always be in my heart."

"That was mainly down to the bravery and generosity of two parents who had lost their child in the same sort of way."

"They had gone on to raise money for the My

BEREAVED: Parents Dean and Luci Morton with daughter Daisy, 7, son Jensen, 4, and Jacob's twin Isaac

WISH Charity and with that money the hospital had purchased a cuddle cot.

"It is not something I had heard of, but without it we would not have been able to spend so much time and get so many memories of our most amazing and beautiful little Jacob."

In memory of Jacob, parents at Wickhambrook Primary School led by the Mortons' friend Bex Newell, organised a fundraising evening for West Suffolk Hospital's bereavement suite.

Dean and Luci – who have two older children,

Daisy, 7, and Jensen, 4 – thanked everyone who attended the event, where an auction, raffle and tombola raised £2,100. They also thanked the hospital staff.

Dean said: "We went through a terrible time but with the support of the staff in the hospital and our friends and family, we were somehow able to cope."

"Isaac is doing well after a difficult start to his little life and we will always have such beautiful memories of Jacob."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Arrest after assault

A 28-YEAR-OLD has been arrested after two men were attacked in Haverhill in the early hours of Sunday morning. The incident took place in Burton End, near the junction with Crowland Road.

Inmates set to gain skills at new prison workshop

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

A VEHICLE maintenance workshop has opened at a prison to help inmates find jobs when they are released.

Highpoint Prison at Stradishall near Haverhill, already teaches inmates carpentry, computing, bricklaying, plumbing, tiling and fitting skills.

The new workshop was started after a prisoner survey revealed that vehicle maintenance was a training programme they would like to see provided.

One inmate, George, said: "Not every prison offers this, but it is a great way to learn new skills which will hopefully lead to getting a job when we leave here."

The workshop was officially opened at an event which allowed employers to learn more about training at the prison.

Kevin Morris, of prison education provider Novus, said at the opening: "This is a really exciting day as a lot of work has gone into setting the vehicle maintenance workshop."

Prison governor Nigel Smith said: "This is an opportunity for me to thank everyone for the incredible community support we have in Haverhill and the surrounding area.

"Without them, and our fantastic staff, this simply would not work. It is a privilege to be able to open such an amazing facility as the vehicle maintenance workshop."

The ribbon was cut by Sarah Howard, chair of community partnership ONE Haverhill, which brings together different groups including business, local politics, police and education.

Mrs Howard said: "At ONE Haverhill Partnership, one of our big priorities is to promote skills and employability for the local community. This is a perfect example of that."

"I have followed the work of the team here for many years now and value the links Highpoint has with the local business community. I am always impressed with the work the team puts in and their innovative approach."

'My family is the reason I

After fighting cancer, Kevin Byrne was told he wouldn't be able to have children. But thanks to fertility clinic Bourn Hall, he's just celebrated Father's Day with not one but two little ones – in spite of his cancer returning. Emma Higginbotham meets the family.

MOST dads gave their children plenty of bear hugs on Father's Day, but you can forgive Kevin Byrne for squeezing his two a little tighter.

After battling cancer as a child, Kevin was told he wouldn't be able to father children – but thanks to pioneering fertility treatment, he's now the proud dad of handsome Arty, 2, and cherubic Evie, who's 9 months.

"They mean everything to me," says Kevin simply. "Arty's my best friend, and Evie makes me just smile every morning – I go in to see her and she just beams. Not just because it's me; it's just the way she is."

But life has been far from plain sailing for the amiable 40-year-old. Last year, when his wife Natalie was pregnant with Evie, Kevin was struck down by a different cancer – and thought he might never meet his unborn baby, or see Arty grow up.

"It feels like we've been on a roller-coaster ride," he admits. "But we're all still here. . ."

Kevin was just 4 when he was diagnosed with non-Hodgkin lymphoma, and underwent months of chemotherapy and radiotherapy at Great Ormond Street Hospital. "They're probably my earliest memories," he says. "I can remember going down on the train, and I remember screaming at the nurses, because when I saw them I knew I was going in for treatment! I was never a fan of that."

After two years he was given the all-clear, but had to have yearly check-ups. It was at one of these, aged 16, that his oncologist broke some unexpected news: "He said I'd be very unlikely to be able to father children, because of the radiotherapy," says Kevin. "I was a bit upset, and I remember my mum saying in the car afterwards that I seemed angry. I guess she thought it wouldn't bother me, but it did."

Kevin was open about it when he fell in love with midwife Natalie, "and I know she thought long and hard about our relationship and our future, because sperm donation, or possibly adoption, would have all resulted in the baby not being fully both of us."

"But our discussions became more around 'Well they told you that you couldn't, but you don't know for sure'," adds Natalie, 32. "He'd never had any tests done."

So he did. Sadly it turned out that the doctors were right: Kevin had a zero sperm count.

"I was disappointed," he recalls, "but not upset, because it confirmed what I already knew in my mind." Natalie, meanwhile, was "gutted" because she'd held out that they'd

The couple, in Sutton, to try IVF who live resolved using donor sperm – until a fertility specialist at Addenbrooke's asked if they'd heard about a new procedure called TESE (testicular sperm extraction). They hadn't, "so she referred us to Bourn Hall, where we were going to go anyway for IVF, and a doctor called Oliver Wiseman said 'Let's see what we can find . . .'"

During the procedure, tissue from Kevin's testes would be removed and examined under the microscope to see if sperm could be found. Lesser men may have paled at the thought, but when the day arrived, Natalie admits that she was more nervous than Kevin ("He's used to being poked and prodded!").

After the procedure, Oliver Wiseman came to Kevin's bedside, "and he told us that he had really good news. They had six vials of sperm," recalls Kevin. "It was pretty emotional – there were tears. Twenty years after being told it wouldn't happen, there was suddenly a possibility that I could actually have my own child."

The IVF process was set in motion but, four months after their wedding in 2012, the first attempt didn't work. Six months later they tried again; two embryos were viable; one was put in, and one was frozen.

Natalie was meant to wait two weeks before taking a pregnancy test, "but she cheated," grins Kevin. "Only by a couple of days," protests Natalie. "I just couldn't stand it anymore – I needed to know. So I snuck off to Tesco, took a test in the loos, came home, and Kevin was playing Xbox. I said 'You're going to be a great dad', and he said 'Yeah, thanks', and I said 'No, you ARE going to be a great dad. It took a minute for the penny to drop . . .'"

"Then I told her off for taking the test early," laughs Kevin. "And then there were more tears. Hugs and tears."

Arty arrived in November 2013, weighing an impressively chunky 9lbs 5oz. "It was incredible," says Kevin, recalling the moment he first held his son. "I was looking at him thinking wow, this has actually happened. And you're really heavy!"

After a blissful year with their baby boy, the couple's minds turned to their frozen embryo. "I had a dream one night that I could hear a little girl calling me," recalls Natalie. "I followed the voice down the stairs to the freezer – and she was, sat on the shelf talking to me. I woke up in the morning and said to Kevin 'Right, we have to use it!'"

"We thought 'If it doesn't work, fine, we've got Arty and we're thankful'. But we both wanted a sibling for him."

With just one embryo available, the couple were gently warned that the odds were against them – but to their absolute delight, it worked. Natalie found out she was pregnant last March, "and we had a gender scan this time; to find out it was a girl was the icing on the cake. It was just lovely."

But their happiness was short-lived. For a while, Kevin had been unwell with persistent tummy bugs, and in May he became particularly poorly following a pub lunch. After a week of being unable to keep any food or water down, he went to the doctor, who diagnosed food poisoning and told him to 'ride it out'.

Another week went by with no improvement. Kevin went back to the doctor, who suggested it might be an ulcer. "He was getting worse and worse, and we were all quite worried," admits Natalie. "They sent him for an X-ray and that came back fine, so we were like 'OK, it's nothing serious . . .'"

But Kevin had darker suspicions. "By the end of June it was definitely in my head that I was seriously ill," he recalls. "It's not something that you ever want to admit to yourself, but I'd lost look forward'

"He told us that he had really good news. They had six vials of sperm. It was pretty emotional – there were tears. Twenty years after being told it wouldn't happen, there was suddenly a possibility that I could actually have my own child" two-and-a-half stone. I needed help."

On a Wednesday in mid-July, Kevin went to Addenbrooke's for a gastroscopy and biopsy. They kept him in while they waited for the results, "and on the Friday a doctor and a specialist nurse came to see me. He had 'the look', and I knew it wasn't going to be great news."

It wasn't. The doctor told Kevin that he had cancer. "I said to him 'Again? I can't believe it's happened again!'"

"He was on his own," adds Natalie, who by then was 15 weeks pregnant. "I was at home, so I got a phone call from him to say it was cancer. And I think that was probably the worst phone call I've ever had."

Kevin had to wait until the following Tuesday to meet the specialist team, "so there were four days of knowing I had cancer, but not knowing how bad it was."

"On the Saturday it was blazing sunshine, and we sat outside the hospital and talked about what we would do: what Natalie would do, how the family would go on, and what I perhaps wanted for them," he says quietly. "It was tricky, but it had to be spoken about because I didn't know what the prognosis would be."

Fortunately, the surgeon was encouraging: "He said he'd looked at the scans and that they weren't talking palliative care, they were talking curative care. I just burst into tears because there was the hope then that I'd get to see my unborn child, and Arty, grow up."

During a 10-hour operation, surgeons removed a tumour from under Kevin's stomach, as well as parts of his pancreas, stomach and bowel. It was a success, but they told him he'd need six months of chemotherapy once he'd recovered from the surgery.

The chemo regime began in September – but the couple were in for another shock that month when little Evie, who was due in mid-

December, decided to make her appearance rather earlier.

"England were playing in the Rugby World Cup, and we were on the sofa watching the National Anthem – and my waters broke," recalls Natalie. "I was only 28 weeks. I was just thinking 'Oh no, not yet! What else will go wrong?'"

Baby Evie arrived five days later, weighing a tiny 2lb 7oz, "but she came out screaming her head off, so that was reassuring." She was whisked away and spent the next seven weeks on the neonatal ward at the Rosie, "and she did ever so well; she's got no on-going health problems. They don't really know why she came early, but they think it might have been to do with all the stress."

Unfortunately, the stress isn't over yet. In a cruel twist of fate, Kevin has found out that the chemo that helped to cure his cancer has caused a rare allergic reaction – his heart has become enlarged and, working at just a third of its capacity, it's left him with breathing issues.

He will now need medication to reduce the size of his heart, "and much further down the line he might need a heart transplant," says Natalie. "But it's not life-threatening in the way the cancer was. He's cancer-free, and we've got to be thankful for that."

Does he feel unlucky? "At times," admits Kevin, "But then I've got these two," he says, drawing Arty in for a cuddle. "And Natalie's been through every step with me. I've got a really strong family around me."

"So yes, I probably do get down in the dumps and feel a bit sorry for myself at times, but compared to where I was this time last year, I'm much healthier – and I have an addition to my family that it was possible I'd never have seen."

"My family means everything to me," he concludes. "They're the reason I get up, and they're the reason I look forward rather than dwelling on the past."

Outstanding in all areas!

"Children's physical and emotional development are extremely well supported."

"Children make rapid progress, embedding key skills for later learning and their eventual move on to school."

"Staff superbly support children"

Rabbits in the park

BASED on Beatrix Potter's tales of Peter Rabbit and Benjamin Bunny, Quantum Theatre present an afternoon of outdoor theatre at East Town Park on Sunday, 3 July, at 3.00pm.

Once Upon a Time There Were Four Little Rabbits is part of the Haverhill Festival organised by Haverhill Town Council.

Peter Rabbit knows very well that he is not to go into Mr McGregor's garden, but he cannot resist, and after several nasty scrapes Peter finally escapes Mr McGregor's clutches. In the second half Peter and Benjamin go back to the garden to recover Peter's lost clothes. Bring a picnic and settle down to some live music and charming story-telling with a show that promises to be a magical experience for young and old alike.

Tickets are £9.00 and £7.00 or £28.00 for a family ticket. Under 3s are free.

Call 01440 714140 or go to www.haverhillartscentre.co.uk.

■ Thursday, June 23 – Friday, July 1.
 ■ Barbara Dickson joins the arts centre tomorrow at 8pm in a special acoustic performance, exploring her catalogue of songs with the support of her pianist Nick Holland. The pair let the words and melodies take centre stage as they perform a wonderful range of material that draws on Barbara's folk roots, her latest exploration of the songs of Gerry Rafferty, and some of her classic hit records. Nick joined Barbara's touring band in the mid-2000s after working with Troy Donockley in the Maddy Prior Band. He also sang on Full Circle, the first album to feature the style of music Barbara now performs. There is also support from the popular Northern Irish singer Anthony Toner. Not to be missed!

■ Three of the UK's most respected acoustic guitarists take you on a journey encompassing everything from the romance of the Spanish guitar to the fire of Gypsy Jazz, the passion of the traditional Celtic sound and beyond. Join Stuart Ryan, Declan Zapala and John Wheatcroft on a guitar journey to remember in Three Colours Guitar on Saturday, June 25, at 8pm. For the serious pluckers out there you can join the professionals at 4pm for an exclusive Masterclass and get the opportunity to study with almost a century of guitar playing experiences, and they are looking forward to sharing their wisdom with you! The workshop will be open to your questions and is suitable for those with three plus years' experience. Free for those attending the performance, £5 if you can't make the show.

■ With Love From Suffolk (12A), a Film Suffolk initiative, is showing on Sunday, June 26. In the vein of multi-stranded films such as Love Actually, this is a feature film of eight short romantic tales. Set entirely within Suffolk, it is not just a funny and tender exploration of relationships, drama and romance but also a love letter to our magnificent county. The audience will also have the opportunity to find out more about the film in a Q & A session with the makers after the screening. Eyes ahead for a 7pm start.
 ■ Renowned international designer

STRINGS ATTACHED: Three Colours Guitar are playing at Haverhill Arts Centre on Saturday and florist Neil Whittaker, NDSF, AIFD, and winner of many awards, will be doing a demonstration on Monday, June 27, based around his designs for the Interflora World Cup held in Berlin in June 2015. Neil represented the United Kingdom and was awarded 'second' and he will be showing many of the techniques he utilised at this event. Doors open at 12.30pm for refreshments and the demonstration starts at 2pm. Tickets must be purchased in advance, to book call (01440) 702754 or (01440) 704062.

■ In spring 2015 Milan paid tribute to Da Vinci by holding an extraordinary exhibition event at the Palazzo Reale. In the Leonardo da Vinci:

The Genius in Milan (part of the Discover Arts Season) on Tuesday, June 28, at 7.30pm, Pietro Marani, the curator of the exhibition, plus some of the world's leading experts tell a story that opens new perspectives and reveals extraordinary things about Leonardo the painter, sculptor, scientist, anatomist, botanist and architect.

■ Edinburgh Fringe Previews are always popular, this year it is the turn of Andrew Maxwell and Larry Dean to preview their new material ahead of their Edinburgh shows. The roof will be tottering on Friday, July 1, at 8pm. Please note the line-up is subject to change.
 ■ Events to look forward to include

Once upon a time there were Four Little Rabbits, a magical show for young and old alike on July 3, at East Town Park at 3pm. A live broadcast by the Kenneth Branagh Theatre Company of Romeo and Juliet on Thursday, July 7, at 7.15pm and a Glyndebourne live broadcast of Die Meistersingers von Nürnberg on Tuesday, July 12, at 5.30pm.

Older drivers cling to outdated advice to teach their offspring

ONE in two learner drivers (54 per cent) are given tuition by their parents – yet many mums and dads show a worrying lack of knowledge of basic driving best practice, with one in five not even sure they'd pass their own test if they took it again.

The research was commissioned by Young Driver, the UK's largest provider of pre-17 driving tuition, following instructors working for the scheme revealing that one of their most dreaded phrases from the youngsters they taught was "but my dad says..."

When questioned, three quarters of parents (76 per cent) believed they were up to date with the latest rules and could provide adequate instruction to their children on driving...but when quizzed on certain facts, many revealed their advice to be wide of the mark.

More than 1,000 people were surveyed by Young Driver, which offers driving tuition to 10-17 year olds at more than 40 venues across Great Britain.

Although only one in four parents (27 per cent) admitted they've picked up bad habits and forgotten what they were taught, it seems many more are still clinging to outdated advice to pass on to their own children.

Mirror, signal, manoeuvre – more than a third of parents (39 per cent) have forgotten this basic rule, despite it being the cornerstone of good driving. One in two (47 per cent) forget to teach their children about the importance of checking dangerous blind spots.

Hand position – Forty six per cent of parents admitted to insisting their youngsters used the original 10 and 2 placement they'd been taught in the pre-airbag era.

Back in the day the orthodoxy was that hands should be kept on the steering wheel at the 10 to 2 position, but that advice has been revised over recent years. It's to prevent a serious injury should a steering wheel airbag deploy.

Steering – Four out of five parents (82 per cent) wouldn't teach the push-pull technique favoured by instructors.

Gear changes – 38 per cent would insist the learner moved up and down the gears sequentially (eg 1-2-3-4-5-6). However, block gear changing is now considered acceptable in many situations.

MAKE IT STOP: Many parents misremember or forget what they were taught Braking – One in two parents (45 per cent) would insist the handbrake was applied whenever the car stopped. However, stopping at a junction on the flat, the handbrake may not always be needed.

Manoeuvres – One in five (19 per cent) would be adamant that a turn in the road was a failure unless it was completed in three manoeuvres. In fact, the modern test allows for up to five turns. Hence, it is no longer referred to as 'the three point turn'.

Assisted technology – One in four (24 per cent) would insist youngsters didn't use parking sensors or cruise control to help with their driving. These are perfectly acceptable in a test situation.

Dads are twice as likely as mum to take their offspring out for practise, with the majority offering additional experience time alongside professional tuition. One in 10 youngsters (nine per cent) rely purely on a family member for their driver education.

Kim Stanton, who heads up Young Driver, said: "We'd hope parents would swot up a bit before giving any dad advice! It might actually help their own driving skills too."

Some worrying stories relating to parents teaching their children came to light during the research, including: "My dad always told me to put my foot down when the traffic lights were on amber to get through."

"My mum was adamant that if I didn't go down through each of the gears when I stopped at a junction I would fail my test – even though I repeatedly said that contradicted with what the instructor told me!"

"My dad was always trying to tell me to squeeze past cyclists and horses when I knew the instructor would tell me to hold back and wait until I could properly overtake. I found it very stressful!"

KODIAQ: New design language

Skoda's Kodiaq adds sporty to robust SUV

THE Škoda Kodiaq, which will celebrate its world premiere in September, is "our first large SUV above the Yeti and, at the same time, the Kodiaq is the first model with the new Škoda SUV design language", according to head of design Jozef Kaba.

Kaba adds that "we are entering a new segment with our first large SUV above the Yeti".

"The Škoda Kodiaq is extremely versatile," he added. "It is exceptionally spacious and with compact external dimensions, it delivers the best overall package in its class. It is also robust, suits all types of terrain and offers the best flexibility and functionality. We wanted to visualise this in the exterior design as well as the interior. Form and functionality are therefore in harmony in the Škoda Kodiaq."

New Infiniti Centre Cambridge

MANY people won't have seen an Infiniti in Cambridgeshire, and some will only know its identity through the association with the Renault Sport Formula 1 Team, but this distinctive car brand is now available locally with the latest range to join the John Banks Group.

Infiniti offers a selection of premium vehicles as an alternative to the mainstream options and has maintained an air of exclusivity since its UK launch in 2009, with the new Infiniti Centre Cambridge only the 12th location in the country where this brand can be test driven and purchased by drivers looking for something different.

Infiniti itself is the creation of the Nissan and Renault Alliance as its prestige mark, and has been building cars since 1989 with huge success in the US and Asian markets. The brand is building momentum with its new partnerships, like that with John Banks in Cambridge, opening new showrooms with plans for up to 26 in the UK in total. Infiniti will always offer a unique opportunity for individuals with only this limited number of showrooms and a further network of authorised workshops to complete servicing and maintenance requirements.

In 2015 the UK registered around 1,200 new Infiniti cars – a 60 per cent increase on the previous year – and sales are set to more than double again this year with the launch of the Q30, the QX30 in June and a new Q60 by the end of 2016. In fact in the first five months of 2016, Infiniti is the fastest growing automotive brand in Britain.

The Q30 and QX30, featuring dramatic curves and a sharp three-dimensional design, are actually made in the UK Infiniti factory in Sunderland after being designed in London. Car aficionados will also notice the influence of Daimler Benz who have also joined the alliance on this project, with similarities of Mercedes-Benz models in some of the cars' detail.

Mark Banks, John Banks Group MD, said: "We were delighted when Infiniti approached us to represent the brand in Cambridge. This is a great opportunity for us to offer a range of cars which is not just new to our group but to the area. We were all in awe of their style and I've seen how popular they are in the US and abroad, so we knew that they will be eagerly received in Cambridgeshire when we opened."

The John Banks Group already offer Honda cars and motorcycles, Renault cars and commercial vehicles, and Dacia and Suzuki cars across Cambridge and Suffolk. The introduction of Infiniti has resulted in a number of new developments for the group to accommodate the new range.

ENTRY-LEVEL Q30: Part of expanding Infiniti range which is now getting the recognition it deserves

A new Group Service Centre is nearing completion around the corner from the Swann's Road location for the servicing and maintenance of Honda, Renault, Dacia and Infiniti cars, with a new 22-bay workshop with individual reception areas and dedicated technicians for each of the brands. Following its opening within the next few months, the existing Renault and Dacia showroom is being redesigned with plans including a 20 new car showroom and increased used car display.

To experience the new Infiniti Range, starting from £20,550, visit the Infiniti Centre Cambridge at 13 Swann's Road, Cambridge, where you will also find a small selection of used Infiniti models. Alternatively more details can be found at cambridgeinfiniti.co.uk or by calling (01223) 788000.

Cowling delighted with new-look squad

BEN Cowling has wasted little time in adding to his Haverhill Rovers squad since taking over as first-team manager.

A number of new signings have come from Haverhill Borough, where Cowling was manager before becoming chairman, to give him what he now believes is a competitive squad for the Thurlow Nunn League, Premier Division.

Those who have joined are strikers Danny Hill and Ryan Weaver, midfielders Jon Milne and Ross Elkins, defenders Sam Holmes and Ryan Geoghegan, utility man Harry Halls, and goalkeeper Charlie Turner.

Marcus Hunt and Luke Haines have re-signed for Rovers, and youngsters Mitchell Burr and Rory Jebb will be promoted from the youth team.

"Given the situation when I joined the club, and the player situation when I arrived, I wanted to get a lot done early on," said Cowling.

"I've been fortunate enough to be able to do that. We've got a lot of good players now and it's quite an exciting unit with the players we've managed to bring in.

"There are some really good signings there, and I'm looking forward to seeing what they can do at step five.

"They're all players

who would have attracted interest from other Thurlow Nunn clubs if they hadn't come to Rovers. I expect some of them to perhaps use us to go on and further their careers further up the ladder as well."

Rovers' first pre-season fixture is away to Earls Colne in less than two weeks, and Cowling is happy to be able to start putting his team together in preparation for that game.

He continued: "I had a bit of a problem in pre-season because I didn't have many players. Normally when you're a manager you're looking to bring in three or four players. I was looking to add 12 players.

"I'm still looking for one or two positions to fill, and we have a couple of trialists with us at the moment so we'll see what decisions we make there.

"I wanted to get everything sorted out quickly because none of these players have played together. Some of the Haverhill Borough boys have played together, as have the younger players, but not all of them in the same team.

"I needed to get people in early so I could work on systems and shapes. Overall, I couldn't be happier with the way player recruitment has gone."

RETURN: Ryan Weaver is back at Haverhill Rovers

Dellar half-century not enough against Wivenhoe

HAVERHILL suffered their fourth successive loss in Marshall Hatchick Two Counties Championship, Division One as they went down by 115 runs at Wivenhoe.

Joey Kettle clinched three for 27, but the hosts were able to rack up a formidable total of 294 for 7.

Despite captain Adam Dellar (52) and Chris Palmer (32) compiling 68 for the second wicket, Haverhill fell well short of the target with 175 for 4.

Cricket

Haverhill II lost by eight wickets at Woolpit II in Division Three.

Weston Colville were no match for Saffron Walden II as they went down by 145 runs in Tucker

Gardner Cambs & Hunts Premier League, Division Two.

Craig Williams nabbed three for 47 in Walden's opening effort of 223 for 9, but there was little to cheer about in their reply as the bottom side were dismissed for 78 in 22 overs.

Matt Daniels did muster an unbeaten 31.

"We were four players short again," said Weston Colville skipper Adie Westley.

"Saffron Walden weren't as strong as I've seen them, but they were too good for us.

"We're just not competitive. We should have a better team out in the second half of the season, but it will probably be too late by then."

Motorsport

Paffett hopes to challenge for top three

GARY Paffett is optimistic he will be able to fight for a place in the top three when the DTM resumes at the Norising street circuit this weekend.

The Haverhill driver has been happy with his performances in his Euronics Mercedes-AMG C63 so far this season, if not all of the results.

And he is buoyed by the fact Mercedes have won at the circuit for the last 13 years.

"We've had a few weeks between the last race weekend (at the Lausitzring)," said Paffett.

"So we've had a bit of a breather and have been able to analyse the data to see where we need to go for the next few races.

"That being said, the Norising is always quite different. There are no fast corners so the car set-up is different to what we would normally have.

"I'm confident we're going there with a better idea of what our best set-up is.

"That means I can concentrate on my driving and fine tuning the car rather than making significant changes to the car."

Paffett, who is 15th in the overall standings, 36 points behind leader Robert Wickens, continued: "I'm heading there looking to be on the podium, that has to be our aim.

"I'm looking to come away with a decent points haul."

Despite the challenging nature of the Norising, overtaking is easier there than at other street circuits, though a strong performance in qualifying is still hugely important for both of this weekend's races given the competitive nature of the series.

"Overtaking isn't really an issue but it's still really important to be near the front of the field," added Paffett.

"You need to be in the front couple of rows to have a chance of winning the race.

"The fans at the Norising are amazing and it's a really enjoyable place to drive in. It's one of the races we look forward to all season."
